2020 Volunteer Impact Report

Volunteers are our backbone

Dear Habitat for Humanity of Gallatin Valley Supporters,

I am excited to present our affiliate's first volunteer impact report.

As our year comes to an end, we are looking back at the difference that our volunteers have made for our organization. This year has been more difficult than most, and COVID-19 has certainly thrown our organization for a loop. This spring, we had to shut down our ReStore, as well as our jobsites, and have had to rely on subcontractors more than usual. But through it all, our volunteers have come back to help us out and have shown that they are the caring, resilient, hardworking people that we know them to be.

Our volunteers have always been the backbone of our organization. They help put up walls, repair decks, and assist ReStore customers. They learn valuable skills and share these skills with other volunteers. They strengthen the community, revitalize neighborhoods, and transform lives. Most importantly, they help us bring our partner families home.

In spite of this year's challenges, our volunteers helped to build stable homes for six deserving families. In this report, you will see the impact that our volunteers made and why we appreciate them. Thank you for reading!

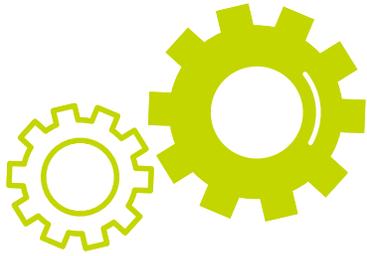

Sincerely,

Drew McLaughlin

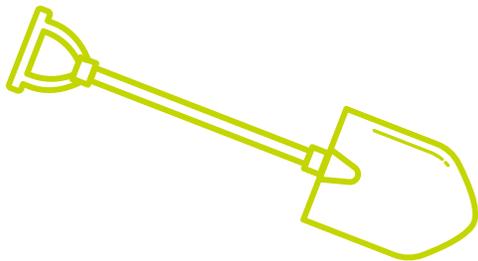

AmeriCorps National Member & Volunteer Services Coordinator

Volunteers are our community

"You should volunteer with Habitat to have the satisfaction of doing something that helps build homes for those who need them." - Ed, ReStore volunteer

"I enjoy the sense of accomplishment in seeing the results of our work. The work has improved my skill set immensely and the relationships with the rest of the Wednesday crew are very special." - Bruce, Wednesday Crew

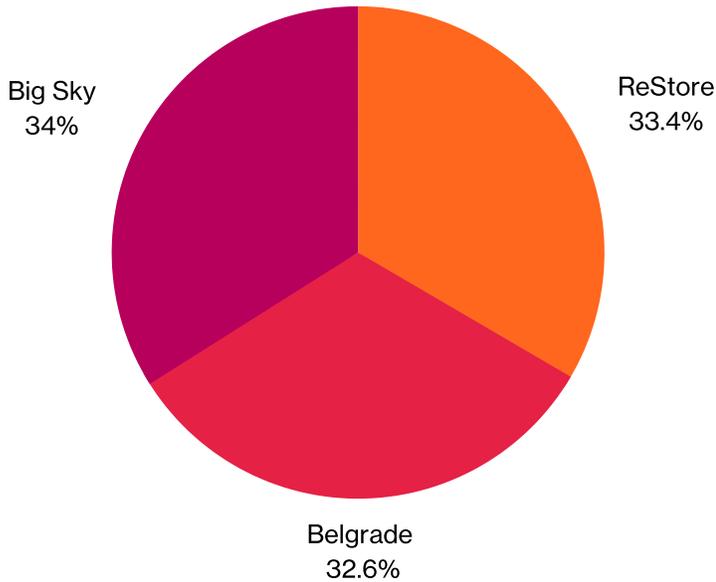

"For the first few years we were in Big Sky I found a gap in my life where Habitat should be... so the Big Sky build fills that gap." - Mel, Big Sky volunteer

"Volunteer. For one, you'll like yourself because you're doing something for the community and two, you should want to help your fellow man." - Don, ReStore volunteer
